	“land” in two systems. Several academicians and scientific methods have been applied for the research. Thus, the structural analysis method was used to find the main differences, advantages and disadvantages of the both systems. The formation of Canada as an independent modern state was due to the unification of the colonies of Canada into a federation. The Constitution of Canada provides for the exclusive right of the provinces to own land and resolve all land tenure issues. To prevent abuses in the sales of state land, all land purchase and sale transactions take place at open auctions. In the work is described some peculiarities of land tenure system and property rights.
